

Getting Started with Consumer Expenditure Data

The Consumer Expenditure Data is based on responses from the Consumer Expenditure Surveys published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Consumer expenditure provides estimates for the amount of money each household spends, on average, for specific products.

The expenses contained in this dataset cover a variety of markets. You will find fields such as:

- Principal and interest payments made on home loans
- Principal and interest payments made on vehicles
- Amount spent on cigarettes or other tobacco products
- Amount spent on Medicare or Medicaid Premiums
- Contributions made to retirement
- Utilities including electricity, gas, and cable
- Insurance payments including homeowners, vehicle, renters, and more.

A Census Tract-based area layer is downloadable for free to users of the latest version of Maptitude. Don't have the latest version of Maptitude? Purchase or upgrade to the latest version of Maptitude to use this premium data.

Tips and Tricks for using the Consumer Expenditure Data

Our monthly newsletter and website have tips and tricks to help users effectively use the Consumer Expenditure Data. Some additional tips have been included below, as well as instructions for installing the data set.

Downloading and Installing the Consumer Expenditure Data Set

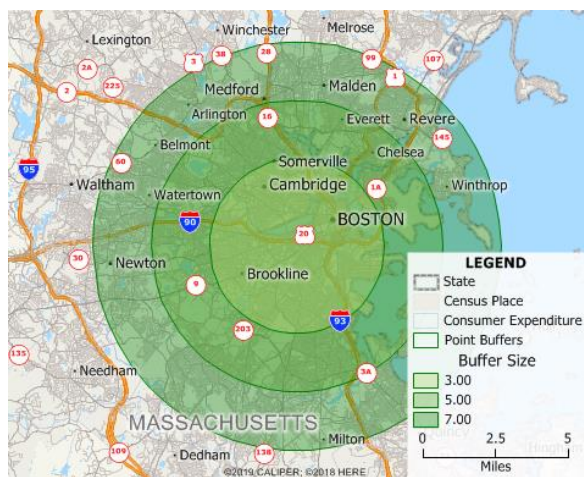

The Consumer Expenditure Data are accessible as a free download.

1. Download the data from the Caliper Store. NOTE, you must have the most recent version of Maptitude in order to download the data.
2. Once the files are downloaded, click OK, and then click Install. Follow the prompts to install the layers.
3. To add a layer to a Maptitude map, open the map, click  on the Standard toolbar or choose Map>Layers..., then click Add Layer to display the File Open dialog box.
4. Browse for the folder where the downloaded data are located (e.g., c:\ccdata\Consumer Expenditure). Choose the ccConsumerExpenditure.cdf file and click Open.
5. Maptitude adds the layer to the map. Close the layers dialog box to see the layers on the map.

Finding the Average Household Expenditure in a Radius

A common use for the Consumer Expenditure Data involves finding the amount spent on a product for a given area. In this example, you will be measuring household expenses for property taxes near Boston:

1. Open a map that contains the Consumer Expenditure layer and zoom or pan to the area of interest.
2. Choose Tools>Analysis>Buffers Toolbar.
3. Click  then click near Boston on the map to plot a point.
4. Click , then click No when prompted to save the point to a layer.
5. Enter 3, 5, 7 in the Sizes box to create buffers of 3, 5, and 7 miles, check the Calculate Demographics and Cumulative Buffers boxes, and click .
6. Choose Consumer Expenditure from the With Layer drop-down and click OK.
7. Click OK to create the buffers.

Maptitude creates buffers of 3, 5, and 7 miles around the location of choice and calculates the annual average household expenditure across the tracts for a variety of items. A Dataview containing purchasing data for the area will be displayed. This Dataview can be searched for a specific expense using the following steps:

8. With the Dataview as the active window, click  or choose Edit>Find...
9. Click on the Field drop-down and type a portion of the name of the field that you would like to examine. In this example, we'll search Property, choose the [Avg Property Taxes] field, and click OK.

The Dataview will automatically scroll to your searched entry and highlight the column that you chose. This Dataview can be exported by choosing File>Export>Table and choosing .xlsx as the file type.

Creating a Field of Aggregate Household Expenditure

You may find it useful to know the aggregate expenditure for a product, that is, the sum of each household's spending on that item by tract. To compute this, you will need to create a new field on the Expenditure layer and fill it with a formula. In this example, you will create an aggregate field for tuition:

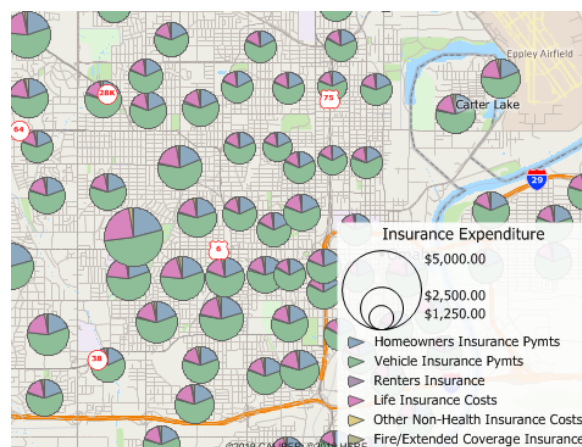

1. Right-click on the Consumer Expenditure layer and choose New Dataview.
2. Click  or right click on any field header and choose Modify
3. Click Add Field. A new field will be added to the bottom of the table structure.
4. Change the new field name to Aggregate Tuition and its type to Real (4 Bytes).
5. Change the format for the Aggregate Tuition field from None to $12,345.12.
6. Click Aggregation and scroll to the bottom of the list, check the Add box next to the new Aggregate Tuition field, click OK, and click Yes to confirm the table changes.
7. Scroll to the far right of the dataview. Right-click on the column header for the empty Aggregate Tuition column and choose Fill.
8. Choose the Formula option and enter the formula Tuition * Households. Click OK, then OK again to fill the column with your formula.

That's all there is to it! This new aggregate column can be used in overlay reports and visualizations like the one described in "Finding the Average Household Expenditure in a Radius."

Comparing Similar Expenses Against One-Another

Many of the expenses in the Consumer Expenditure Data come from similar categories and industries, such as different types of furniture purchases, appliance purchases, or even payments on various insurances. You can compare similar products using a Chart Theme.

1. Click  or choose Edit>Find... and search for a location or use the zoom and pan tools to navigate to an area of your choice.
2. Right-click on the Consumer Expenditure layer and choose Make Working Layer.
3. Choose Map>Thematic Mapping>Chart.
4. Type Insurance in the Filter box.
5. Highlight all the fields containing "Insurance," choose a pie chart as the Chart Type, and click OK.

Maptitude creates a chart theme across the Expenditure layer, with different colored slices of the pie charts indicating the amount spent on different types of insurance. The total size of each pie chart is representative of the amount spent on non-healthcare insurance.

Finding Average Spending in Your Territories

The Consumer Expenditure data set makes it easy to find how much people are spending, and what they're spending their money on, in your territories.

1. To begin, open a workspace containing a territory layer and the Consumer Expenditure layer.
2. Right-click on your territory layer and choose Make Working Layer.
3. Choose Tools>Analysis>Overlay.
4. Choose Consumer Expenditure from the Layer drop-down, uncheck Count the Number of Features box. Optionally, you can check Create a Report.
5. Click OK.

Maptitude calculates the average household spending for all items in your territories and displays a Dataview with the results. This Dataview can be exported to Excel by choosing File>Export>Table and changing the file type to .xlsx. If you checked Create a Report, then you'll also see a report containing the same information.

Aggregating Spending to Another Layer

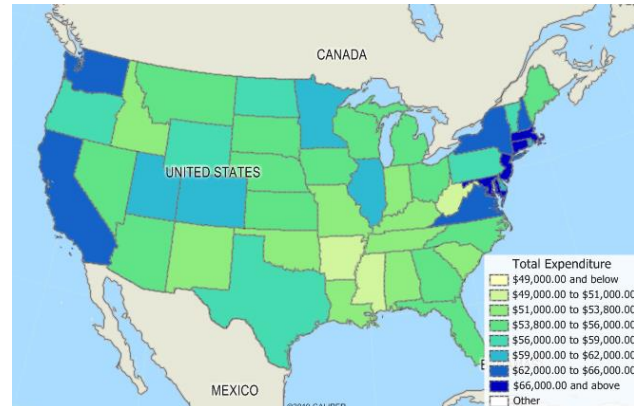

Finally, you can aggregate the expenditure data to another layer. In this example, we'll calculate the total expenditure across all the states in the United States, but any expense and geography could be substituted for similar results.

1. Open a map that contains the State layer and the Consumer Expenditure layer.
2. Right-click on the State layer and choose New Dataview.
3. Click  or right click any field header and choose Modify.
4. Click Add Field, rename the field to Total Expenditure, and make sure the Type is set to Real (4 bytes).
5. Change the format for the Total Expenditure field from None to $12,345.12.
6. Click OK, then Yes to confirm changes to the table.
7. Scroll to the far right of the dataview, right-click your new Total Expenditure column, and choose Fill.
8. Choose Aggregate.
9. Choose Consumer Expenditure from the Layer drop-down.
10. Choose Average of from the Fill with drop-down, choose [Total Expenditure] from the next drop-down list, and choose Households from the Weight By drop-down list.
11. Click OK to return to the Fill dialog box and click OK again. Mapitude fills the field with the weighted average for the field you chose. Note that this may take a while as the total expenditure for each state is being calculated.

Your new field can be used for thematic maps and analysis on the State layer. For example, you can create a color map of total expenditure in each state using the steps below:

1. Right-click the State layer and choose Make Working Layer.
2. Choose Map>Thematic Mapping>Color.
3. Choose your Total Expenditure field from the Field drop-down and click OK.

Maptitude creates a color map of annual average household expenditure by State.
